

SC Thrive Honors SCDC/Manning Reentry/Work Release Center Employee

Rodney Robinson of Manning Reentry/Work Release Center was recently presented the top award from SC Thrive for his passion in working with the inmate client base at the South Carolina Department of Corrections. Robinson is a Human Service Coordinator who has worked with the Department of Corrections for nine years. An additional award was presented to the South Carolina Department of Corrections for its overall commitment in working with the offender population.

SC Thrive is a nonprofit agency designed to assist returning citizens with their efforts toward eliminating physical and/or emotional barriers to their re-entry. SC Thrive affords agency counselors the privilege to complete various social service applications while the returning citizens are incarcerated. The collaboration between SC Thrive and SCDC has been instrumental in empowering the offenders the agency serves to contemplate a positive and consistent change. In their lives.

Through this partnership, South Carolina households have benefited greatly by way of returning citizens being approved for benefits ranging from SNAP (food stamps) to Medicaid. The agency also offers training for new counselors, technical assistance, and linkages to strategic partners who support efforts toward future collaboration and networking.

Manning Reentry/Work Release Center Warden Nena Walker-Staley and Mr. Robinson

